U.S. Department of Justice Disclaimer. This project was supported by Contract No GS-23F-9755H awarded by the Office of Justice Programs, U.S. Department of Justice to Booz Allen Hamilton, and its partners: the Institute for Intergovernmental Research and CNA. Points of view or opinions in this document are those of the author and do not necessarily represent the official position or policies of the U.S. Department of Justice.

OVERVIEW

Justice system reform has captured the attention of the American public. While the discussion generally has focused on sentencing policies, police accountability, and reentry, recent efforts by state court judges, court administrators, and advocates have brought attention to a less-examined but equally significant issue: the harmful effects of assessing and enforcing fines and fees in an arbitrary or discriminatory manner. Most of these fines and fees are imposed for minor matters such as traffic infractions or municipal code violations, and many are imposed by the over 6,500 municipal or local courts in the United States.

2

Justice systems – traditionally funded primarily from a jurisdiction’s general tax revenues – have come to rely increasingly on funds generated from the collection of fines and fees, or “legal financial obligations” (LFOs). In some places, justice systems have been transformed into revenue centers that pay for even a jurisdiction’s non-justice-related government operations. The U.S. Department of Justice addressed an example in a report of its investigation into the practices of the Ferguson, Missouri police department and municipal courts. Ferguson is not unique; similar problems exist throughout the country.

The effect of LFOs on individuals, their families, and our communities can be devastating. In isolation, an individual fine or fee may appear insignificant, but for many people, paying a fine that, together with associated fees and assessments, can easily exceed several hundred dollars can be challenging. And the obligations can easily and rapidly add up. For example, a person ticketed for a municipal violation who cannot afford to pay the original fine can be charged late payment fees and compounding interest and be subjected to further consequences such as wage garnishment or driver’s license revocation. The accumulation of obligations can result in hundreds, if not thousands, of dollars of debt. Moreover, some local and state courts across the United States also employ LFO collection practices that are not only unwise and harmful, but also unconstitutional. In certain jurisdictions, courts have routinely incarcerated individuals for nonpayment of fines they simply cannot afford, even though the Constitution prohibits it. Because of these practices, even individuals charged with non-criminal minor violations can suffer significant and prolonged harm if they have limited financial means.

For an individual charged with a criminal offense, the assortment of fees assessed by the justice system can be especially daunting. These include costs associated with pretrial detention, the assignment of a public defender, general court administration, and electronic monitoring, to name a few. For those convicted of a crime, the debt accrued by the assessments of LFOs can be a substantial barrier to successful reentry back into their communities following the completion of their sentence. These harms are most frequently felt by the most vulnerable members of our communities – not just those who are justice-involved, but their families and children, too – as they become trapped in cycles of poverty that can be nearly impossible to escape.

IN SO MANY INSTANCES AN INDIVIDUAL’S ACCESS TO JUSTICE HAS BECOME PREDICATED ON THEIR ABILITY TO LITERALLY PAY FOR IT. WHAT IS THE PRICE OF JUSTICE?”

– ATTORNEY GENERAL LORETTA LYNCH, DEC. 3, 2015

Last year, the Justice Department took a significant step to call attention to and help resolve these issues. On December 2, 2015, the Department convened a working session called, “Poverty and the Justice System: The Effect and Fairness of Fees and Fines.” On December 3, the White House sponsored a companion event – “A Cycle of Incarceration: Prison, Debt, and Bail Practices” – to bring public attention to the connection between poverty and the criminal justice system and to highlight state reform efforts. These convenings brought together judges, court administrators, academics, prosecutors, legislators, advocates, and other justice system actors and national experts to examine the practice of assessing and enforcing LFOs, the effects on individuals and communities, and examples of how jurisdictions are addressing these issues. Participants shared many promising reforms, including the following:

- The Ohio Supreme Court’s bench card instructing judges on constitutional and state law requirements and alternatives to jail for those unable to pay LFOs;
- Georgia’s statute implementing certain reforms to the use of private probation in the state;
- A Washington scholar’s in-depth study of the state’s statutory framework for fines and fees and counties’ practices;
- Vermont’s prosecutor-led driver’s license restoration day, providing individuals with suspended licenses due to failure to pay traffic fines an opportunity to satisfy delinquent debts by paying $25 for each ticket;

- Colorado’s law requiring that, before incarcerating someone for willful nonpayment, judges must make a finding on the record that payment would pose no undue hardship to the individual or his or her family and that the person made no good faith effort to pay; and
- Michigan’s Ability to Pay Workgroup, which produced a report including legal guidance, tools, and best practices to assist judges and court staff with determining an obligor’s ability to pay, establishing payment plans, providing payment alternatives, enforcing court-ordered financial obligations, and identifying uncollectible debts.

The participants of the working sessions suggested many other crucial reforms – transparency and accountability of courts’ collection and disbursement of fines and fees; guidance on relevant constitutional law; development of model statutes and rules for the assessment and enforcement of fines and fees; research on impacts of promising practices; best practice standards for indigency determinations; case studies of successful alternatives; and improved data collection, coordination, and technology, to name a few. While much remains to be done, the examples listed above are worthy of examination. As one working session participant observed, “Nothing less than the public’s faith and confidence in the justice system depends on” our collective efforts to make the assessment and enforcement of LFOs more fair, equitable, and just.

To build on the December working sessions, the Department’s Office of Justice Programs (OJP) Diagnostic Center is providing this guide, which identifies resources and related publications to address issues related to fines, fees and other financial obligations. The resources identified by the Diagnostic Center are intended to be a starting point for executive-level decision makers to explore how science and data can be used to inform policy decisions and support the creation of strategies at the state, local and tribal levels.

The resources included in this Guide are organized into four key areas: 1) Backgrounders 2) Case Studies, 3) Issue Studies, 4) Reform Guidance and 5) Reform Tools. Table 1 below defines each of the categories.

RESOURCE TYPE	DESCRIPTION
BACKGROUNDERS	High level publications that provide broad insight into the nature and effects of an issue or range of issues, often including high level policy or reform recommendations. These documents provide valuable information to a wide audience, including policy makers, law enforcement, pretrial agencies, courts and probation and parole agencies.
CASE STUDIES	Studies that provide a comprehensive look at the dynamics of challenges and reform efforts undergone by local and state governments with regard to fines, fees and/or bail. These documents provide the most value to policy makers, pretrial agencies and courts.
ISSUE STUDIES	Primarily academic studies that examine a particular issue in depth and often apply quantitative social science methods to test a hypothesis. These documents generally provide the most value to policy makers and courts.
REFORM GUIDANCE	These documents provide guidance in the change process or method for developing new policies/procedures.
REFORM TOOLS	These documents present example tools used in previous reform efforts. These documents generally provide the most value to policy makers, pretrial agencies and courts.

Year: 2015

This video covers the full day of the December 3, 2015 White House convening on prison, debt and bail practices.

3. ATTORNEY GENERAL LORETTA E. LYNCH DELIVERS REMARKS AT WHITE HOUSE CONVENING ON INCARCERATION AND POVERTY, WASHINGTON, DC., UNITED STATES, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 3, 2015

Source: The Department of Justice

Year: 2015

Attorney General Lynch engages in a high level discussion of the issues of fines and fees, poverty, and justice; some of the Department of Justice efforts to address these issues; and a call to reorient the conceptualization of justice away from a commodity that can be quantified and towards an inherent right.

4. BAIL FAIL: WHY THE U.S. SHOULD END THE PRACTICE OF USING MONEY FOR BAIL

Source: Justice Policy Institute

Year: 2012

This report addresses trends in bail use, effects of bail on the judicial process and communities and effective alternatives to bail.

5. CHANGING PRIORITIES: STATE CRIMINAL JUSTICE REFORMS AND INVESTMENTS IN EDUCATION

Source: Center on Budget and Policy Priorities

Authors: Michael Mitchell and Michael Leachman

Year: 2014

This report examines high incarceration rates and state prisons, related fiscal and policy issues, and state funding for education, and provides recommendations for policy reform to shift funding from incarceration to education.

6. CHARGING THE POOR: CRIMINAL JUSTICE DEBT & MODERN-DAY DEBTORS' PRISONS

Source: Maryland Law Review (forthcoming)

Author: Neil L. Sobol

Year: 2015

This document compares the modern conditions and practices of criminal justice debt collection and enforcement to debtors' prisons and provides a framework for reducing incarceration of the indigent.

BACKGROUNDERS

7. COURTS ARE NOT REVENUE CENTERS

Source: Conference of State Court Administrators

Authors: Carl Reynolds and Jeff Hall

Year: 2012

This publication outlines relevant case law for filing fees and criminal court costs, provides principles to guide the development of revenue vehicles in the court system, and makes recommendations for reforming state revenue structures.

8. CRIMINAL JUSTICE DEBT: A BARRIER TO REENTRY

Authors: Alicia Bannon, Mitali Nagrecha and Rebekah Diller

Year: 2010

This report describes the growth and causes of criminal justice debt, its effects on incarceration, reentry, and the roles of courts and correctional agencies, and policy recommendations for addressing the costs of criminal justice debt.

9. EVIDENCE-BASED PRETRIAL RELEASE

Source: Conference of State Court Administrators

Author: Arthur W. Pepin

Year: 2013

This policy paper provides an overview of the pretrial release system and advocates for the adoption of evidence-based risk assessment in setting pretrial release conditions.

10. FUNDAMENTALS OF BAIL: A RESOURCE GUIDE FOR PRETRIAL PRACTITIONERS AND A FRAMEWORK FOR AMERICAN PRETRIAL REFORM

Source: National Institute of Corrections

Author: Timothy R. Schnacke

Year: 2014

This document provides a comprehensive and in-depth overview of the status of bail and pretrial justice in the United States, including the history, legal foundations and principles and standards for bail and pretrial justice. It also presents a case for the necessity of pretrial justice reform, and lays out guidelines for reform of the pretrial justice system.

11. MONEY AS A CRIMINAL JUSTICE STAKEHOLDER: THE JUDGE'S DECISION TO RELEASE OR DETAIN A DEFENDANT PRETRIAL

Source: National Institute of Corrections

Author: Timothy R. Schnacke

Year: 2014

This report provides information on the history of law and pretrial decision making, describes the current state of pretrial decision making, and suggests approaches to improve judicial pretrial decision making.

BACKGROUNDERS

12. NATIONAL SYMPOSIUM ON PRETRIAL JUSTICE: SUMMARY REPORT OF PROCEEDINGS

Source: The Pretrial Justice Institute and The Bureau for Justice Assistance

Year: 2011

This report covers the proceedings of the National Symposium on Pretrial Justice, presenting the perspectives of speakers and panels at the Symposium on issues including bail reform since 1964, the current status of pretrial justice, evidence-based reform, and local level successes.

6

13. ON CASH AND CONVICTION: MONETARY SANCTIONS AS MISGUIDED POLICY

Source: Criminology & Public Policy

Author: Katherine Beckett and Alexes Harris

Year: 2011

This essay summarizes research on fines and fees in the United States criminal justice system and compares them to day fines used in Europe. It contends that the disadvantages outweigh the advantages in the U.S. system.

14. PENALIZING POVERTY: MAKING CRIMINAL DEFENDANTS PAY FOR THEIR COURT-APPOINTED COUNSEL THROUGH RECOUPMENT AND CONTRIBUTION

Author: Helen A. Anderson

Year: 2008

In this document, the author discusses the disadvantages of recoupment, the process of requiring defendants to repay the cost of their court appointed attorney, and argues that the practice should end.

15. PROFITING FROM PROBATION: AMERICA'S 'OFFENDER FUNDED' PROBATION INDUSTRY

Source: Human Rights Watch

Author: Chris Albin-Lackey

Year: 2014

This report discusses hardships faced by probationers in “offender funded” probation programs, where companies collect fees from probationers to fund the probation services the companies provide, and makes a case for greater transparency and oversight by the government.

16. REDUCING RACIAL AND ETHNIC DISPARITIES IN JAILS: RECOMMENDATIONS FOR LOCAL PRACTICE

Authors: Jessica Eaglin and Danyelle Solomon

Year: 2015

This report looks at the composition of the jail population at factors that contribute to incarceration, including pretrial detention and criminal justice debt, among others. It also suggests a number of approaches to decrease incarceration and racial disparities.

17. REPORT FROM THE PRESIDENT'S COUNCIL OF ECONOMIC ADVISORS ON FEES, FINES, AND BAIL

Source: The President's Council of Economic Advisors

Year: 2015

This report describes how fines, fees, and bail in the criminal justice system disproportionately impact the poor, leading to concerns about fairness in the criminal justice system.

BACKGROUNDERS

18. SENTENCED TO A LIFE OF CRIMINAL DEBT: A BARRIER TO REENTRY AND CLIMBING OUT OF POVERTY

Source: Clearinghouse Review Journal of Poverty Law and Policy

Author: Rebecca Vallas and Roopal Patel

Year: 2012

This document discusses the motivations behind fines and fees, their disadvantages, and highlights several efforts underway to improve upon the system at the state level as models of reform.

19. THE DEBT PENALTY – EXPOSING THE FINANCIAL BARRIERS TO OFFENDER REINTEGRATION

Source: John Jay College of Criminal Justice

Author: Douglas N. Evans

Year: 2014

This report examines the causes and effects of criminal debt, in particular how fines and fees often fail to raise revenues for legal systems while negatively affecting the reentry process for formerly incarcerated individuals, and suggests approaches to improve on the application and collection of fees.

20. THE PRETRIAL DETENTION ‘CRISIS’: THE CAUSES AND THE CURE

Source: Journal of Urban and Contemporary Law

Author: Douglas J. Klein

Year: 1997

This document assesses the shortcomings of bail, pretrial services, and pretrial detention practices, and discusses a set of solutions to address these shortcomings.

21. THE RISK ASSESSMENT ERA: AN OVERDUE DEBATE, GUEST EDITOR’S OBSERVATIONS

Source: Federal Sentencing Reporter

Author: Sonja B. Starr

Year: 2015

This brief essay makes a case for the institution of a standardized risk assessment to assist judges in making pretrial release, bail, and detention decisions.

2. CASE STUDIES

CASE STUDIES

1. A ‘NEW NORM’ FOR PRETRIAL JUSTICE IN THE COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA: PRETRIAL RISK-BASED DECISION MAKING

Source: Virginia Department of Criminal Justice Services

Author: Kenneth Rose

Year: 2013

This document presents information about The Commonwealth of Virginia’s implementation of the Virginia Pretrial Risk Assessment Instrument and some of the institutional barriers to its successful employment. It also makes recommendations for the improvement of pretrial justice and effective use of the Instrument.

CASE STUDIES

2. A DECADE OF BAIL RESEARCH IN NEW YORK CITY

Source: New York City Criminal Justice Agency, Inc.

Project Director: Mary T. Phillips

Year: 2012

This report summarizes the findings of a decade-long research project studying bail policy and practices in New York City. It tracks changes to the bail system, analyzes strengths and weaknesses of pretrial justice policy and its implementation, and makes recommendations for further reform.

3. ALTERNATIVES TO PRETRIAL DETENTION: SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF IOWA

Source: Luminosity, Inc.

Author: Marie VanNostrand

Year: 2010

This report outlines the Southern District of Iowa's strategies to reduce pretrial detention rates while assuring court appearance and community safety and contains a third-party assessment of the effectiveness of the District's strategy.

4. BALTIMORE BEHIND BARS: HOW TO REDUCE THE JAIL POPULATION, SAVE MONEY AND IMPROVE PUBLIC SAFETY

Source: Justice Policy Institute

Author: Nastassia Walsh

Year: 2010

This report provides an in-depth look at the functioning of the Baltimore pretrial, court, and prison system and provides recommendations for reducing jail populations, including reforming pretrial and bail practices.

5. COURT DEBT AND RELATED INCARCERATION IN RHODE ISLAND FROM 2005 THROUGH 2007

Source: Rhode Island Family Life Center

Year: 2008

This report describes factors relevant to court debt in Rhode Island, which has relatively high levels of detention due to court debt, and analyzes the relationship between court debt, pretrial detention, and overall incarceration rates in Rhode Island.

6. DAY FINES IN AMERICAN COURTS: THE STATEN ISLAND AND MILWAUKEE EXPERIMENTS

Source: National Institute of Justice

Authors: Douglas C McDonald, Judith Greene and Charles Worzella

Year: 1992

This report examines the experimental implementation of day fines in Staten Island and Milwaukee to assess the usefulness of day fines, finding that they have the potential to increase collection rates and reduce costs associated with uncollected fines.

CASE STUDIES

7. INMATE FEES AS A SOURCE OF REVENUE: REVIEW OF CHALLENGES

Source: Massachusetts Executive Office of Public Safety and Security

Year: 2011

This report examines the state of fees imposed in inmates, their impact on inmates and the community, and the possibility of imposing additional fees, finding that existing fees already impose a burden and create challenges for reentry and recommending against the imposition of additional fees.

8. INVESTIGATION OF THE FERGUSON POLICE DEPARTMENT

Source: Department of Justice, Civil Rights Division

Year: 2015

This report provides a broad discussion of the issues brought to light during the investigation of the Ferguson Police Department, including an analysis of the imposition of fines and fees in the municipal courts.

9. MARYLAND'S PAROLE SUPERVISION FEE: A BARRIER TO REENTRY

Author: Rebekah Diller, Judith Greene and Michelle Jacobs

Year: 2009

This report describes the Maryland parole supervision fee's impact on parolees and their reentry prospects, characterizing the fee as counterproductive and providing recommendations to improve its implementation.

10. NEW YORK'S CREDIT CARD BAIL EXPERIMENT

Source: The New York City Criminal Justice Agency

Project Director: Mary T. Phillips

Year: 2014

This report analyzes the results of New York City's experimental program to accept bail by credit card, finding that defendants who were offered the option to pay bail by credit card were released at higher rates and spent less time in pretrial detention.

11. TAMING THE SPECIAL ASSESSMENT BEAST

Source: Court Manager

Author: Nial Raen

Year: 2007

This article describes the reform of the Michigan judicial branch's fee assessment process, which simplified the funding system by collecting fees into and allocating from a single justice system fund.

12. REDUCING FAILURE TO APPEAR IN NEBRASKA: A FIELD STUDY

Source: University of Nebraska

Authors: Mitchel N. Herian and Brian H. Bornstein

Year: 2010

This article documents an experiment in which researchers sent defendants post cards reminding them of their court hearing, and found that the post cards were effective, and that message content influenced their effectiveness.

CASE STUDIES

13. REPORT TO THE JOINT INTERIM COMMITTEE ON STATE JUSTICE SYSTEM REVENUES : STATE OF OREGON

Source: National Center for State Courts

Year: 2010

This report compares the funding structure for the Oregon court system to several other U.S. states.

14. THE ASSESSMENT AND CONSEQUENCES OF LEGAL FINANCIAL OBLIGATIONS IN WASHINGTON STATE

Source: Washington State Minority and Justice Commission

Authors: Katherine A. Beckett, Alexes M. Harris and Heather Evans

Year: 2008

This report analyzes the assessment and consequences of fines, fees, and restitution orders in Washington State, examining their impact on convicts and the reentry process, as well as whether their effects are consistent with legislative intent.

15. THE HIDDEN COSTS OF FLORIDA'S CRIMINAL JUSTICE FEES

Author: Rebekah Diller

Year: 2010

This report examines the application of fines and fees in Florida, with particular attention to the challenges that court debt poses to the indigent and in the process of reentry, and the extent to which fees are cost effective.

16. THE OUTSKIRTS OF HOPE: HOW OHIO'S DEBTORS' PRISONS ARE RUINING LIVES AND COSTING COMMUNITIES

Source: American Civil Liberties Union of Ohio

Year: 2013

This report provides an overview of the disadvantages of the system of court fines and fees in Ohio, and detailed cases of individual experiences with court fees.

17. THE PRETRIAL RELEASE PROJECT: A STUDY OF MARYLAND'S PRETRIAL RELEASE AND BAIL SYSTEM.

Source: The Abell Foundation

Year: 2001

This report assesses the system of pretrial release in Maryland through a comparison of Baltimore with other districts in Maryland, and makes recommendations for improvement of the pretrial release system.

18. THE STATEN ISLAND DAY-FINE PROJECT

Source: National Institute of Justice

Authors: Laura A. Winterfield and Sally T. Hillsman

Year: 1993

This brief provides an overview and analysis of the experimental implementation of day fines in Staten Island in order to assess the feasibility of implementing day fines in the United States.

CASE STUDIES

19. WHY CRIME DOESN'T PAY: EXAMINING FELONY COLLECTIONS

Source: Institute for Court Management

Author: Don K. Murphy

Year: 2015

This report investigates the challenges in collecting fines and fees in felony cases state wide in Florida and in the local courts of Volusia County and provides a number of recommendations for improving collections rates.

3. DRAWING BLOOD FROM STONES: LEGAL DEBT AND SOCIAL INEQUALITY IN THE CONTEMPORARY UNITED STATES

Source: American Journal of Sociology

Authors: Alexes Harris, Heather Evans, and Katherine Beckett

Year: 2010

This study analyzes national and state level court data to assess the social and legal consequences of monetary sanctions.

4. GIVE US FREE: ADDRESSING RACIAL DISPARITIES IN BAIL DETERMINATIONS

Source: Legislative and Public Policy

Author: Cynthia E. Jones

Year: 2013

This article provides an overview of studies on racial bias in bail, examples of state efforts at pretrial racial justice reform, and recommendations for pretrial justice reform.

5. INVESTIGATING THE IMPACT OF PRETRIAL DETENTION ON SENTENCING OUTCOMES

Source: Laura and John Arnold Foundation

Authors: Christopher T. Lowenkamp, Marie VanNostrand and Alexander Holsinger

Year: 2013

This report investigates the connection between pretrial detention and prison sentencing, finding a correlation between pretrial detention and both increased sentencing to prison and longer length of sentence.

6. TESTING FOR RACIAL DISCRIMINATION IN BAIL SETTING USING NONPARAMETRIC ESTIMATION OF A PARAMETRIC MODEL

Authors: Shawn D. Bushaway and Jonah B. Gelbach

Year: 2010

This study investigates discrimination in bail setting, finding that black defendants are assigned higher bail levels than white defendants.

7. THE CRIMINAL AND LABOR MARKET IMPACTS OF INCARCERATION

Author: Michael Mueller-Smith

Year: 2014

This report analyzes data from a county in Texas to investigate the social and economic impacts of incarceration on the incarcerated individual after reentry, and incarceration's effect on recidivism.

8. THE LABOR MARKET CONSEQUENCES OF INCARCERATION

Source: Princeton University

Authors: Bruce Western, Jeffrey R. Kling and David F. Weiman

Year: 2001

This article discusses the possible mechanisms that link incarceration to impacts on employment and earnings, and the difficulty in establishing causal inference.

9. THE MARK OF A CRIMINAL RECORD

Source: The American Journal of Sociology

Author: Devah Pager

Year: 2003

This article analyzes the data from a study designed to test the effects of a criminal record on subsequent employment opportunities for black and white job seekers.

10. THE PRICE OF JAILS: MEASURING THE TAXPAYER COST OF LOCAL INCARCERATION

Source: Vera Institute of Justice

Authors: Christian Henrichson, Joshua Rinaldi and Ruth Delaney

Year: 2015

This report investigates the cost of local jails by calculating jail-related costs borne by other parts of government and that are therefore not reflected in jail budgets.

ISSUE STUDIES

11. UNSECURED BONDS: THE AS EFFECTIVE AND MOST EFFICIENT PRETRIAL RELEASE OPTION

Source: Pretrial Justice Institute

Author: Michael R. Jones

Year: 2013

This study analyzes the effects of secured and unsecured bonds on public safety, court appearance and jail bed use, finding that unsecured bonds are generally as effective as secured bonds and result in reduced pretrial detention.
