Can anybody in NPAP or the Rogues give me something to support a demand of $2000/day or more for my 14 days over-detained client. Am I completely off in left field with that? I'll take federal decisions, any jurisdiction, if you have them.

I just searched that NY Court of Claims data base and found one case where award was $85 (don't know how many days, in 2000 AD) and another where they awarded $75/day for 7 days (in 2002 AD). OY!

Could anyone run me a Verdict Search for that? I don't have access to it.

Michael -

I have similiar facts (31 days) so I would appreciate it if you let me know what you find and how you do $$ wise. Who is the AAG on your case and are in Albany?

To answer your questions, the Court of Claims has a searchable decisions page. Its crude (you search by term) but maybe you will find something. I found Smith v. State, #2007-030-014, Claim # 111410. It granted the claimant SJ and awared him $10 per day, citing to a 4th Dept. case that deals with the time a claimant should have been in the SHU, not over-dentention in jail like our cases. Its a 1994 case. I hope in Smith that the claimant got screwed because he was pro se and that $10 per day is not the going rate.

Please let me know what you find.

Thanks,

Eric
