

Almost every department loves the ADVANCED TASER and then comes to a dead stop when the issue of holstering. Most don't think there is room on the belt for the ADVANCED TASER, but some innovative ideas have changed that thought. In fact, at over 180 agencies out of our 2,400 client departments, the ADVANCED TASER is standard issue equipment. For example, the attached photo is a shot of a sergeant from Orange Co, FL Sheriff's department who is tall, but very slender. He has the yellow ADVANCED TASER on his belt full of all of equipment. (Note he is left handed).

Holster gun on
OCSO Hopkins.JP...

Holster on OCSO
Hopkins.JPG

Holster sideww
OCSO Hopkins.JP...

First, most departments carry the ADVANCED TASER in various holsters. (Some, keep them in the box in the trunk or under the front driver's seat. These few departments have very few uses and the old adage of "out sight and out of mind" sets in or even if it is considered, the officer on scene doesn't have time to say, "timeout, let me go back to the car and get my ADVANCED TASER. At present we have no mount for anything inside the car.)

We sell our own line of holsters made by BladeTech. These are good in that we both designed the holsters together. They are available in what is called a TEK-LOK which can fit 2 1/4 belts and can be easily added to a duty belt in seconds (literally). The photos below are prototype photos with our pricing. Unfortunately, if you were the recipient of this equipment early on, you may have had a problem with them. We've had T&E issues with our latest thigh rig from Blade-Tech since it was only a prototype. Went it hit the field, we had to tweak it a little bit. (We couldn't make it ambidextrous as we initially imagined for example. If we don't lock tight the screws, then the holster is ambidextrous. If we don't lock tight the bolts, a squad car's vibration and the walking action will loosen the screws... we didn't anticipate that, etc.) Here's what we have thus far. Thankfully, these adjustments have been fixed and they are worth looking at. For example, we have an injected molded plastic holster that mounts to a solid thigh holster rig. We just recently added the capability to carry a spare Air Cartridge. It's finally coming together (with many delays from lessons learned on the T&Es). Now that we've worked the bugs out, it's one of the most popular holsters we have.

Bladetech Quik Rel
back.jpg

Police Agency
Pricing Only Fin...

Bladetech Thigh w
AC.JPG

Second, there are several good holster folks out there that are good with holstering the ADVANCED TASER:

Go to these sites:

www.desantisholster.com (Kydex and leather)

www.specopstech.com (Ballistic Nylon and will specialize holsters. These are ambidextrous and are really good quality. The LAPD, Los Angeles Co Sheriff's, an many others really like this equipment. Jim Craag is your contact there and he's good people.)

SO Tech2.pdf

SO Tech
Holsters.pdf

SO Tech Line.pdf

www.gouldusa.com/catalog/search\_byGun2.asp?gunID=511&gunMan=TASER&gunModel=M26 (leather and kydex type holsters)

www.blackhawkindustries.com/product\_catalog.asp?option=search&searchterms=taser (Ballistic nylon mostly)

Note: Here is our information on our holsters:
<http://www.taser.com/products/accessories02.html#bladetech>

Bianchi back.jpg

Bianchi.jpg

Blackhawk holster.jpg

Gould and Goodrich swivel.jpg

Gould and Goodrich.jpg

SO Tech back.jpg

SO Tech Front open.jpg

SO Tech Front.jpg

Let me know what information I need to get to you to get us back on the same page. Again, my apologies. FYI, we are tweaking our current nylon thigh holster as well with improved buckles, belt buckles, and stitching. I've attached the latest info on that as well. Our pricing is attached, but you need to contact S.O. Tech with their pricing.